

Consultant

We have the opportunity to invite applications for a new Consultant to join Futerra – the UK’s leading sustainability communications agency.

This role will involve helping some of the biggest brands overcome their greatest challenge; engaging their employees on sustainability in order to transform the way they work to become a successful 21st century business.

With a natural flair for coming up with remarkable solutions you feel confident managing important projects and demanding clients. Your great listening skills are coupled with your ability to conduct robust research and analyse data to come to brilliant conclusions.

Your creative spark is inspired by everything from the blogs you read (and the one you write) to the exhibition you recently attended (which you raved about on Twitter).

You combine enthusiasm to use communications to make a difference with experience of putting marketing into practice. You understand the basis of behaviour change – you’ve read up on your Gladwell and Cialdini, and you’ve been involved in implementing behaviour change campaigns with tangible results.

Regardless of whether you’ve come from an agency or client-side, you have measured the impact of your achievement and have a story to tell. If so, we look forward to hearing it and meeting you!

Introduce yourself by sending a CV and one page outlining your greatest success to jobs@futerra.co.uk

Please have it reach us by 6 July 2009 (we know you always meet even the tightest of deadlines!)